Founded by the late, great C.C. Chapman in 1915, the Oregon Voter Digest was for over 70 years the political and financial publication of record for Oregon's leaders. The historical publication is archived with the Oregon Historical Society.

Bruce Broussard became owner and publisher of the Digest in 1983, and since then the publication has continued to serve as an indispensable handbook and guide for state politicians, business professionals, and citizens interested in the history of civic affairs, taxation, business, and finance in the state of Oregon.

In 1990, Bruce and Norma Broussard started the television iteration of the Digest at Roger's Community Cable TV, with Bruce hosting a lively and topical talk show which to this day provides a forum for debate and the exploration of issues of both local and national import.

Now Bruce has renewed his commitment to the Digest with a vibrant and interactive online magazine. OVD's companion website continues the tradition, providing a principled conservative interpretation of events that will hopefully help to establish balance in a state where one-party rule in media and politics has become the problematic norm.

In conjunction with the cable talk show, Oregon Voter Digest magazine will engage readers of all political persuasions to join the discussion, get involved in solutions-oriented dialogue, and better hold legislators and candidates accountable for their actions.
